

Susanne used to ride horses in California...

After the abortion, she needed a different way to get around.

"Get in touch with my dad. Tell him I love him."
Women are 3.5 times more likely to die within a year after abortion.

Susanne walked into the abortion clinic, but left on a stretcher. There was no anesthesiologist when the barbiturate they gave her sent her into cardiac arrest. Without oxygen, Susanne lapsed into a coma. After four months, she awoke in a nursing home, unable to talk and paralyzed from the neck down. Three years later, she died of pneumonia. Her last words were typed on a voice synthesizer: "Get in touch with my dad. Tell him I love him." State law did not permit Maryland officials to prosecute the abortionist or the clinic, which grossed an estimated $10 million in 5 years. Susanne wasn't even counted as a statistic, since few states require abortionists to report complications. Learn more about widespread coercion, serious risks and healing options at:
